

CRIMINOLOGY, CRIMINAL JUSTICE, LAW & SOCIETY

ABOUT THE JOURNAL

Criminology, Criminal Justice, Law & Society (CCJLS), formerly Western Criminology Review (WCR), is the official journal of the Western Society of Criminology. This peer-reviewed journal builds on the mission of its predecessor by promoting understanding of the causes of crime; the methods used to prevent and control crime; the institutions, principles, and actors involved in the apprehension, prosecution, punishment, and reintegration of offenders; and the legal and political framework under which the justice system and its primary actors operate. Historical and contemporary perspectives are encouraged, as are diverse theoretical and methodological approaches. CCJLS publishes theoretical and empirical research on criminology, criminal justice, and criminal law and society; practice-oriented papers (including those addressing teaching/pedagogical issues); essays and commentary on crime, law, and justice policy; replies and comments to articles previously published in CCJLS or WCR; book and film reviews; and scholarly article reviews.

EDITOR

Jennifer L. Lanterman, University of Nevada, Reno, Department of Criminal Justice

EDITORIAL STAFF

Managing Editor: Nicholas Matera, University of Nevada, Reno
Copy-Editor: Vanessa Burrows, California State University, Long Beach

EDITORIAL ADVISORY BOARD

Martin A. Andresen, Simon Fraser University	Michael R. Gottfredson, University of California, Irvine	Christine S. Scott-Hayward, California State University, Long Beach
Hadar Aviram, University of California, Hastings	Stuart Henry, San Diego State University	Jonathan Simon, University of California, Berkeley
Susan Bandes, De Paul University	John Hipp, University of California, Irvine	Michael R. Smith, University of Texas, San Antonio
Gisela Bichler, California State University, San Bernardino	Anne Hobbs, University of Nebraska, Omaha	Don Stemen, Loyola University Chicago
Martin Bouchard, Simon Fraser University	Beth Huebner, University of Missouri, St. Louis	Christopher Totten, Kennesaw State University
Kate Bowers, University College London	Shane Johnson, University College London	Michael Townsley, Griffith University
Joel Caplan, Rutgers University	Delores Jones-Brown, John Jay College of Criminal Justice	William C. Thompson, University of California, Irvine
Meda Chesney-Lind, University of Hawaii at Manoa	David Klinger, University of Missouri, St. Louis	Bonita Veysey, Rutgers University
Patricia Ewick, Clark University	Mona Lynch, University of California, Irvine	Michael D. White, Arizona State University
Marcus Felson, Texas State University	Daniel Macallair, Center on Juvenile and Criminal Justice	Kevin Wright, Arizona State University
Ben Fleury-Steiner, University of Delaware	Aili Malm, California State University, Long Beach	Frank Zimring, University of California, Berkeley
Henry F. Fradella, Arizona State University	Lisa Pasko, University of Denver
Jona Goldschmidt, Loyola University Chicago	Ray Paternoster, University of Maryland
Angela Gover, University of Colorado, Denver	Kim Rossmo, Texas State University

Preface and Reviewer Acknowledgements

Over the past several decades, Criminology/Criminal Justice as an academic field of study has grown at an unprecedented rate in its interdisciplinary breadth and depth of scholarship, growth within the field, and advances in science, technology, and evidence-based practice. In a relatively short time period historically, Criminology/Criminal Justice has become an umbrella discipline with its own distinct identity as inherently interdisciplinary spanning multiple fields of study and practice. Criminology/Criminal justice increasingly encompasses areas of scholarship beyond the traditional criminology and criminal justice focus on criminological theory and police, courts, corrections to include intersecting fields such as forensic science, forensic psychology and psychiatry, victimology and victim services, restorative and community justice, critical race theory and gender studies, public health, mass media technology, and computer science. At this time of fast-paced in our own and other disciplines, we are challenged as scholars to engage in methodologically innovative research that matters to increase opportunities for justice and to better understand and improve the lives and lived realities of justice-involved individuals, victims and survivors of crime, criminal justice professionals, and communities. The discipline continues to advance interdisciplinary investigation that integrates multiple lines of scholarship from a broad range of fields of study, perspectives, voices, methodological frameworks, and perspectives. The scope of scholarship at the core of the mission of CCJLS -- "to promote understanding of the causes of crime, methods used to prevent and control crime, the institutions, principles, and actors involved in the apprehension, prosecution, punishment, and reintegration of offenders; and the legal and political framework under which the justice system and its primary actors operate." Along these lines, our editorial philosophy aligns with the mission of CCJLS with the goal of further advancing scholarship that is interdisciplinary in nature, broad in scope in terms of multidisciplinary connections, methodologically innovative inclusive of frameworks that bring to the forefront a range of voices and perspectives, applied with recognition of academic-practitioner partnerships, and cognizant of the fast-paced and changing role of science and technology in criminology/and criminal justice.

We would like to thank the CCJLS Editorial Board. Members of an editorial board are one measure of a journal's significance and we are extremely fortunate to have an impressive array of scholars from a range of disciplines relevant to CCJLS's mission who serve on our Editorial Board. Our board members not only contribute their names to help build the reputation of the journal, but also share their insights to help us steer the journal toward growing prominence through their service as reviewers of the submissions we received. Finally, we are grateful to the reviewers who graciously served as peer-reviewers for the current issue. These volunteers include the following scholars:

Andersen, Judith
Fradella, Henry

DeCarlo, John
Totten, Christopher

Sincerely,

Jennifer L. Lanterman
University of Nevada, Reno

COPYRIGHT

CCJLS retains all copyrights to articles and materials published herein. Any individual may read and download CCJLS articles and materials for personal use. In addition, individual and entities may also save, print, copy, and redistribute material published by CCJLS under the terms specified below.

Permitted Uses by the Original Author(s): The original author(s) of any article published by CCJLS is/are free to download, save, print, copy, and redistribute material published by CCJLS in any medium or format for teaching or other educational purposes. Moreover, the original author(s) of any article published by CCJLS is/are free to remix, reuse, and build upon their articles, provided that a citation to the original publication in CCJLS (including a link to the published work on Scholastica) is included.

Permitted Noncommercial Uses: All individuals, noncommercial organizations, and nonprofit institutional users are free to download, save, print, copy, and redistribute material published by CCJLS in any medium or format for teaching, other educational, and noncommercial purposes, subject to the following limitations:

- You may not edit or otherwise make any alterations to the text.
- You may not create and distribute any derivative works. In other words, if you alter, remix, transform, or build upon any of the material published in CCJLS, you may not distribute the modified material in any format or medium with the express written consent of CCJLS.
- You must give appropriate credit to CCJLS using the following language: “Copyright [year] by the journal of Criminology, Criminal Justice, Law & Society (CCJLS) and The Western Society of Criminology. Used by permission.”
- You must provide a link to the original article on Scholastica if you are electronically reproducing or distributing any work copyrighted by CCJLS.
- Your redistribution must be accomplished in a reasonable manner, but not in any way that suggests that CCJLS, the Western Society of Criminology, or the author(s) of the original material endorse you or your use.
- Under no circumstances may individuals, organizations, or institutional users create a so-called “mirror” of any written materials in the CCJLS web site. Instead, live links to the CCJLS web site must be made.

The permission granted under this section does not include permission for any for-profit institution or entity (including, but not limited to, for-profit publishers and for-profit colleges and universities) to download, save, print, copy, redistribute, or other reuse articles or materials published by CCJLS, even if for educational purposes.

The permission granted for noncommercial purposes does not include permission for any person or entity—other than the original author(s)—to alter, remix, transform, build upon, reuse, or republish, either in whole or in part, any portion of any articles or materials published by CCJLS in (a) an article in another journal, (b) a chapter or other portion in a book, or (c) electronic media, other than under terms that would be considered “fair use” (e.g., quotes or closely paraphrases of up to a maximum of 10 percent of the text of an article). This applies even if the article, book, or other medium is freely available and, therefore, the person seeking to reuse CCJLS materials believes the reuse or republication to be noncommercial. Thus, any person or any entity seeking to alter, remix, transform, build upon, reuse, or republish, either in whole or in part, any portion of any articles or materials published by CCJLS beyond what is permitted under the fair use doctrine must receive the express written consent of CCJLS under the terms specified below in the section “Other Uses by All Persons and Entities.”

Other Uses by All Persons and Entities: CCJLS articles and materials may not be printed, copied, republished, redistributed, or otherwise reused (either in whole or in part) by any individuals or organizations for either resale, profit, or any commercial purpose without the express written consent of CCJLS. A fee may be payable. For further information, including permissions to print, copy, republish, redistribute, or otherwise reuse any CCJLS articles and materials beyond those authorized herein or by the fair use doctrine, please email the CCJLS editors at CCJLS@WesternCriminology.org.

DISCLAIMERS

The opinions expressed in the articles included are those of the authors and do not reflect necessarily the views of the Western Society of Criminology, CCJLS, the CCJLS editors or staff, or any of the institutions with which editors and staff are affiliated or any of the universities sponsoring the journal of CCJLS.

Materials included in the CCJLS may reference other electronic sources through hypertext or other links that are not affiliated with the CCJLS. CCJLS is not responsible for those links.

VOLUME 25, ISSUE 3 – DECEMBER 2024

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Feature Articles

The Impact of State Laws on Officer-Involved Deaths (OIDs)

Morgan J. Steele & Ziwei Qi.....1

A Judge Is the Person Who Decides Who Sings Better: Children’s Comprehension of Legal Terminology

Ana Sacau-Fontenla & Joana Morais21

